ELECTRIC GUARD DOG SURGES IN INDUSTRY RANKINGS

Top trade magazine debuts EGD as the 29th largest security firm in the U.S.

Columbia, SC – May 15, 2011 – Electric Guard Dog received a major industry endorsement today when Security Dealer Magazine premiered EGD at #29 in their 2011 Top 100 Security Companies in the United States.

As the oldest and most widely distributed security trade journal in the nation, SDM's annual Top 100 is recognized as an industry standard.

Electronic Guard Dog CEO Jack DeMao attributes his company's impressive debut to the integration of multiple technologies including wireless communication, remote activation, as well as video and interior intrusion products.

DeMao further credited his staff for the company's rapid growth. "Customers are always commenting to me about the quality and commitment of our people. Our people and their teamwork are the fundamental reason for our success."

EGD's #29 debut ranking comes on the heels of the company posting a remarkable 14% growth rate in 2010. Their quality products and attentive customer service have attracted market leaders in all core markets. They are currently anticipating record growth in the coming year.

Electric Guard Dog, the #1 Theft Deterrent Service in America, is proud to be a security partner with more than 2500 commercial and industrial locations across the nation, helping protect businesses, provide a safer work environment for employees, while reducing total security cost. Electric Guard Dog's multi-layered, solar powered perimeter security solution stops crime before it happens.
